Lonely Planet : Rome Encounter Travel Guide (Lonely Planet) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Rome Encounter Travel Guide (Lonely Planet):

Love these little guide books!By LoisitaI guess the title says it all, although I am bringing several other guide books for specific information on architecture, artists,etc. I like these Lonely Planet books because they are concise, accurate and a lot of fun. The maps are intelligently laid out for each area, with the sites and cafes noted. I have bought several of these books for NYC and Florence and found them intelligently written, with up to date (well, as up to date as you can get for a printed book) information.0 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Rome, Rome on the RangeBy Sanford L. SchantzIf you're going to visit the Vatican Museum be sure to bring your skateboard with you. You'll need it to shoot down the corkscrew exit of the museum. It will also come in handy so you can accelerate through this ponderous museum that never ends. My suggestion is to start from the end and work to the front. Everyone wants to see the Sistine Chapel but they make you go through 90% of the museum before you come to it. They have numerous teaser signs along the way making you think it's just ahead but in reality it's at least an hour or more to get to it. I can't believe I did this twice?? Believe me, it would be better to be excommunicated. 4 of 10 people found the following review helpful. Interesting, but not the best. By Vee Bee While the contents of this guide were interesting and somewhat different from the norm, I did not find it to be on the level of others I have used.
