Wonderfully written book that is loaded with interesting, little-known "curiosities" By Melissa Y. I would recommend this book to anyone, particularly those about to visit the eternal city. Drago's books provide information that you won't find elsewhere and they're written in such a matter-of-fact way that makes them easy to read and accompany you on your trip.

In Rome: Sights and Insights, Vincent Drago reveals many of the secrets and mysteries of the Eternal City in a simple, straightforward style that will delight Rome-lovers everywhere. Climb the Spanish Steps and walk the Ancient Appian Way. Learn the stories behind Rome's historic neighborhoods. Admire the magnificent Column of Trajan and the colorful uniforms of the Vatican Swiss Guard. Visit some of the wonders of the Capitoline Museums. The history of this city is filled with interesting curiosities, anecdotes, and legends. Why does Campo de' Fiori have a decidedly anticlerical reputation? How does a design by Michelangelo on an ancient Roman gate ridicule a pope? Why is there a statue of an angel at the top of a pagan emperor's tomb? Why is a foreign-born queen buried in St. Peter's Basilica along with dozens of popes? The answers to these questions and many more await you in Vincent Drago's Rome: Sights and Insights.

About the Author Vincent Drago, a native of New Iberia, Louisiana, holds a Master of Arts degree in Latin from Loras College in Dubuque, Iowa. He taught the ancient language for over thirty years in schools in Louisiana and Mississippi. Vincent traveled to Rome several times during his teaching career, including a fourteen-month stay during a sabbatical leave in 1991-92. He participated twice in the six-week summer session of the American Academy in Rome, and he is a three-time participant in Reginald Foster's summer Latin program in Rome. When Vincent retired in 2000 he moved to Rome where he lives in the historic Trastevere neighborhood. He is the author of The Sights of Rome, published in the spring of 2010.
