Hannah Robinson : Secret Edinburgh An unusual guide before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Secret Edinburgh An unusual guide:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Excellent! Entertaining, and practical. By Customer One of the best guide books I've read in a long time (I read about a dozen or more each year). Book is laid out by geographic areas with maps at the beginning of each section with number-coded entries that correspond to the topic-specific two-page write-ups with beautiful accompanying photographs of the sites. Well-written with a bit of wit that makes for both informative and entertaining reading. An excellent complement to your Fodor's, Lonely Planet, or Eyewitness. While not all of these sites might warrant a full-day venture, the maps make it easy to add one of these lovely sites to your "regular" stops. Highly recommended. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By Customer See the reviews on the UK site

Discover hidden gardens and clandestine art that even the neighbours overlook, visit the strangest of museums, get water-boarded in a prototype Jacuzzi and traumatised by Rabelaisian rafters, decrypt mysterious Masonic markings, step inside an Icelandic lava grotto, travel to the Wild West of Morningside, learn the secrets of Mrs Coade's stone, sniff out the dogs more dazzling than Greyfriars Bobbie, track down traces of Edinburgh's Great Exhibition... Far from the tourist traps and the crowded landmarks, you may have thought Edinburgh had no more to reveal, but the city still keeps many treasures hidden away in the most unexpected of places. An indispensable guide for those who thought they knew Edinburgh well, or who would like to explore the curiosities of this most secretive of cities.

About the Author Hannah Robinson is an Edinburgh-born writer and film director. Her films and screenplays are usually fictional and comic, but she has also made many documentaries about rescued buildings and monuments. She has worked as a food journalist for The Scotsman and The List magazine, and as a designer for the Edinburgh International Film Festival, and has an insatiable curiosity for discovering new places, people and stories.
