The right to return home being recognized, it is logical that the right to compensation for damages sustained by the colonist s who availed themselves of the right to return home upon the release from their revious allegiance to the previous ome State is not to be enforced. Meanwhile, the Ukrainian delegation has officially declared that in viov of the compensation for damages unjustly occasioned to them during the v war, the Ukrainian People's Republic would treat such colonists as Ukrainian nationals. Seventh Chapter. The provisions contained in this Chapter regarding the guarantee of freedom from penalty for certain acts connected with war events, are based on the desire to promote friendly relations between the German and the Ukrainian Peoples and to put an end, in so far as is possible to oppositions that have hitherto existed. To that end an amnesty for enemy aliens is foreseen in Article 20 and another such amnesty in Article 21 for the national inhabitants, whilst in Article 22 further agreements are reserved. In so far as according to these, nationality is deemed important, the date of the Peace Treaty will have to be decisive to pass judgment thereon. It appears as a law of humanity that those punishable acts which prisoners of war or interned or deported civilians have committed in enemy land shall not be further prosecuted or penalized by the authorities of that land after the reestablishment of peace; for such persons have, as a rule, acted under the psychic impression of imprisonment, and besides they have frequently been severely punished according to the seriousness of their action. These considerations have been taken into account in Article 20, §§1,2. It furt...
